"The Role Of Blacks in the Judicial System"

Discussion questions:

1.) Why do citizens in generally, specifically African Americans, have such a low regard towards voting in the political system? Why has the Black race evolved from using legislation to gain civil rights, to having cynical attitudes about government which won't allow them to get involved?

2.) What does Colin Powell's acceptance as a presidential candidate, by the white community and former candidate, Jesse Jackson's non-acceptance predict for future Black presidential candidates? Are the Black politicians currently in office achieving any real mainstream POWER in the political system? Why or Why not?

3.) What is our role as student's at the University of Michigan in respect to fulfilling the commitment of the Black Action Movements? Are the products demanded by BAM still being delivered successfully to its beneficiaries: the Black student population at Michigan?

4.) Are unconventional strategies of protest more effective in changing the plight of the African American, or should change flow through conventional channels such as, voting, writing letters, etc.? What are the downfalls of both techniques?

5.) What kind of impetus or event will it take to bring about mass participation of the Black community? Are more social movements such as the Civil Rights Movement, Million Man March, etc., required to unify the Black race and end racial discrimination in the judicial system?.
