Debating C.C. Little Past and Present at the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor

On September 1, 2017 members of the faculty of the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, along with an undergraduate student, at the University of Michigan formally submitted a case to have C.C. Little's name removed from the building on campus that has carried his name since 1968. The cover letter is included below.

Led by Professor John Carson (History) they worked throughout the summer to

This is the among the first powerful test cases of whether this process will allow us to productively debate the merits of renaming requests, and whether it will prove to be a mechanism for institutional change. After you read the case, and if you are convinced by its merits, you can endorse the request here by adding your signature and/or by sending your own thoughts to President Mark Schlissel (mschlissel@umich.edu) between now and November 1, 2017. We hope that this process will encourage open debate, and that your endorsement will bolster the case for renaming the CC Little Building.

Respectfully,

John Carson, Associate Professor of History
Matthew Countryman, Associate Professor of History
Joshua Hasler, Undergraduate Honors History Major
Martin Pernick, Professor of History
Alexandra Stern, Professor of American Culture, Women's Studies, History, Obstetrics and Gynecology

The Cover Letter, submitted September 1, 2017

Dear President Mark Schlissel and Professor Terrence J. McDonald,

I write on behalf of a group of faculty and students in response to Professor McDonald's note of March 15, 2017 inviting me to elaborate on my request that the name of the C. C. Little Building be changed (see below). I apologize for the delay in writing back, but the task proved more involved and time consuming than I had anticipated, and could have only really been done outside of the press of teaching and administrative duties.

Attached you will find our document providing background on President Little and the C.C. Little building, as well as our detailed argument for why we believe the name of the building should be changed. At the end of the document we reply specifically to each of the eight principles enunciated in the President's Advisory Committee on University History memo to the President of January 6, 2017. We found that speaking to the principles alone did not allow us to develop our case as fully as we deemed necessary, and so we have adopted this hybrid format.

We hope that as part of the process of considering a change in the name of the Little building, and any other building for that matter, there will be some sort of public discussion open to the entire U-M community, where any interested party will be

In the end, the greatest single beneficiary of a careful consideration of the university's names is the university itself. Students, alumni, faculty, and staff are vital contributors to this process and, as members of the university community, are affected by the names the university has chosen to memorialize. Going forward, we encourage a broad, inclusive process that addresses all of the stakeholders.

As an alum and retired science teacher, I agree that the C.C. Little Science Building should be renamed. Just the history of eugenics and the effect those practices had on women, minorities, and the mentally disabled warrants the renaming. It's time to retire building names that are associated with practices such as these that certainly do not uphold our "leaders and best" motto. Find a true leader in the field of science. Rename it.

As a historian of science, my stomach turns every time I enter the C.C. Little Building. Little was on the wrong side of so many issues. He left a pernicious legacy we are still struggling to overcome. UM has plenty of heroes to choose from.

We put up signs and start initiatives with platitudes about diversity, acceptance, and inclusion. What do those efforts mean if, at our fundamental core, we still celebrate Eugenics? If every time a person of color walks into a building they are forced to view this kind of bigotry as acceptable in campus life, what does that say about what we really value? How can we be the leaders and the best, yet we are still stuck in a horrid past! Move us forward!

In addition to long standing support for the eugenics movement, Little played an important role in establishing the use of paid scientific experts to undermine widespread consensus, helping to establish the "Merchants of Doubt" in service of the tobacco industry. The same methods are now creating global risks through climate denial. It is past time to rename this building to honor one of the many other remarkable figures from the University of Michigan's history.
