SANDHI

- THE ESSENCE OF HARMONY -

A passion. A religion. A tradition.

The institution of music, sangeet, has been eternally vested in the veins that embody and transcend the Indian heartland. Eons ago, the rich, fertile bosom of mother earth bore to man boons of ingenuity and craftsmanship to fashion the earliest instruments — blessed articles of boundless, enchanted might. Man carefully nurtured these seedlings of tonal bliss into bouquets of melodious symphony. He naturally absorbed this blossom and inherently birthed an instrument of individuality that endures to this day. In each one of us, there dwells an instrument whose tune sings songs of many a chord. Whether it be the sciences, whether it be the arts, innate in all of us is an instrument of potential, that when masterfully conducted, strums out the tune of the soul of India. Today, we showcase a material parallel of these instruments in this poetic symphony of music and dance. Join us today in bearing this lotus of harmony, this Sandhi — The Essence of Harmony.

American National Anthem

Performed By:

Olivia Setto

Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,

What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming?

Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,

O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?

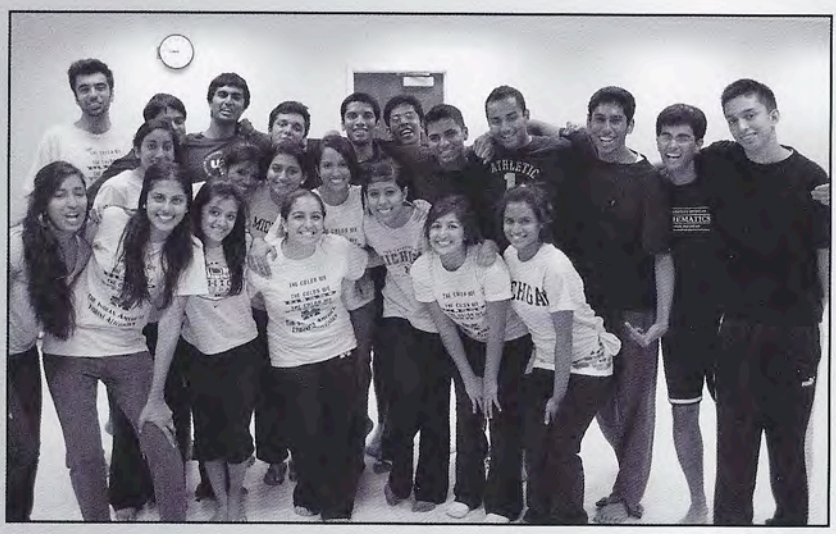

And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,

Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.

O say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave

O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave

Rising from the fertile earth of rural India, the Village dance is an eclectic depiction of the sheer vastness and incredible beauty of the Indian landscape that is often overlooked. However, this dance style is deeply rooted in the long, patch worked history of the subcontinent that portrays the life and culture of the myriad of ethnic groups that call India home. The dance features a classical style and an upbeat tempo that is tuned from the strings of the Rawanhathha of the Thori people, evoking the sentiments of community and unity. The bow-plucked hymns that resonate from its bowl along with the rings of ghungroos, or bells, fashion a humble yet powerful ballad that pulsates through the villages of India — the very same villages that Mahatma Gandhi once credited as being the "soul of India".

The status of women in India has evolved over the past few millennia. From a largely unknown social position in ancient times through the low points of the medieval period, and to the fight for equal rights by reformers, the journey of women in India has been very eventful. The Expression dance vividly captures the emotions that all women experience throughout their lives. The dances artistically portrays feelings such as love, jealousy, seduction, and empowerment through an eclectic mix of modern, classical and fusion music. The melody of the Shehnai, a clarinet-esque instrument, insightfully and melodiously attempts to emulate the tale of the women of India and all over the world.

The Southern alter ego of Bollywood, South Indian dance implements upbeat movie songs, an exaggerated elaboration of traditional Carnatic music, to paint the excitement and energy that pulsates through the region. Based on the graceful strums of the Veena, a plucked stringed instrument that resembles a lute, this dance style celebrates the eternal universe through the beauty of the body and motherhood - the basis of South Indian culture. This unique style of dance contains steps inspired from traditional folk dances, which lend to hype movements and decorated formations.

A world-renowned signature of the Indian arts is the enigma of Bollywood cinema. The song-and-dance sequence is an intrinsic attribute found in a plethora of Bollywood movies. Bollywood dance is the artistic foundation of every great Indian film, an externalization of a character's thoughts often used to foreshadow an event yet to occur. Typically, the art of Bollywood dancing incorporates embellished classical dance styles and courtesan-like actions such as singing, dancing, and recitation of poetry. The Harmonium, a freestanding musical keyboard instrument strikingly similar to a Reed or Pipe Organ often supports the execution of these sequences. The tunes of the Harmonium foster the superhit, megamasala blockbusters that garner the masses every Friday night.

Raas or Dandia Raas, along with Garba, is the featured dance of Navratri, the Festival of Nine Nights, evenings in Western India. Origins of Raas can be traced to ancient times where Lord Krishna performed Raas Lila with the village women, as cited in a number of mythological masterpieces found across the country. Tracing back to the origins of Raas, the art form did not involve many vocals; the beats of the Dhol and the Dandia sticks alone were more than enough to add to the spry and vibrant euphoria. The Dhol, a generic Indian drum, is quintessential in almost all Indian music but is most needed in Raas, without which the style would be empty and lack the entertainment value for which it universally receives acclaim.

Modern Indian fashion has been selectively inspired by countries the world over, Modern Indian fashion has been selectively inspired by countries the world over, expanding its horizon to stylistically adapt foreign cues. Similarly, Indian music has been ever-changing with a recent annexation of various Western influences. Here, we see new beats and new instruments, like the Trumpet, being incorporated in the vibrant company of more traditional Indian sounds. The Trumpet's unique acoustics harmonize with the ethnically chic saris, sherwanis, salwar kameezes, and lahngas. With its unconventional but lively feel, the Trumpet adds a whole a new element to the Fashion Show.

Originating from the rich nomadic tradition of the Roma people, this distinct blend of European and South Asian pot pourri materializes in an ethnic dance involving intricate hand motions, flamboyant facial expressions and intimate partner interactions. At the heart of Gypsy theatrical art resides the Dafli, or tambourine, an integral source of tempo and rhythm that elevates the mood of all performances. It adds and sustains a joyous jingle to the philosophy of the celebration of life that the Gypsies dwell by. Swaying to the chimes of the Dafli, the Gypsy culture seeks to display and share an extravagant and multihued facet of the spectrum of the heritage of the Roma.

Classical is a traditional Indian dance which showcases Bharatanatyam as its predominant style. This all-girls dance symbolizes the very core of ancient India by integrating a form of Cathir, the art of temple dancing. The Classical dance form can be characterized by subtle but significant gestures, including highly emphasized head, eye, and hand movements. All of these motions, as well as deliberate and defined dance steps play to the beats of the Mridangam, a rhythmic percussion instrument that is often the sole actor that upholds the dancers. This drumming ensures that the artists keep their timing in check while also aiding in the culmination of a grand finale – a critical aspect of this dance form.

Since the beginning of time, man has cultivated creativity and innovation, deriving music from Mother Nature. Just as the world's landscape and scenery allowed him to discover the arts of painting and sculpting, man has used Mother Nature to portray vivid emotions of wind, water, earth, and space. Sounds of the incoming storms, splashing ocean waves, buzzing insects, and sonic booms, allowed man to interpret his hopes and optimism by recreating and compiling melodies of natural sounds. As time progressed, these sounds came together and music was born creating a means for man to tangibly represent and reconcile divine beauty with his innermost desires.

Bhangra is a lively form of music and dance that originated in the region of Punjab. It was initially perceived as a folk dance farmers enjoyed as a way to celebrate Vaisakhi, or the coming of spring and the new Bhang harvest. The dance has, today, reached far beyond the lush fields of Northwestern India gaining popularity the around the world for its upbeat style of music and dance. At the soul of folk music in Punjab, is the Tumbi, a high-pitched, single string plucking thunderstorm that is essential to maintaining the spirited movements of the dance. With the passionate and exuberant sounds of the Tumbi, Bhangra today has widened its reach globally and has been incorporated into a multitude of different genres, including pop music, film soundtracks, and even collegiate competitions.

Manav Sadhna

Dedication to Mankind

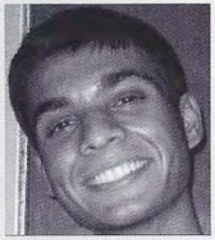

Inspired by Gandhi's principles of truth, non-violence, uplifting the poor and oppressed, promoting health and sanitation, and educating the poor masses, Manav Sadhna has begun a movement to adapt these ideals to the current and complex issues facing not only India but the world. Manav Sadhna wishes to plant the seeds of hope and inspiration among all people, especially those neglected by society. They serve more than 4,500 children and women via 38 different projects. The projects are created based on the needs and participation of the community which indirectly touch the lives of 4,000 more individuals. Manav Sadhna's projects cover an array of social issues including community development, health and hygiene and education. In the coming year, they look forward to strengthening current projects, further expanding their reach, and undertaking new projects that work towards their mission.

Indian American Student Association

The Indian American Student Association (IASA) was formed in 1983 by a group of students who aimed to create a voice for the Indian-American community. Through the years, the goals of IASA remain unchanged despite the continually changing composition of its membership. IASA aims to preserve and increase awareness of Indian and Indian-American heritage through the ideals of cultural, political and social awareness, and community service. This organization provides opportunities for students to connect with each other, while building bridges with other student groups and the University community.

In 1997 IASA established the Gandhi Day of Service, an event credited with mobilizing University students and allowing them to partake in community service acts throughout the Detroit area in the name of unity. This day is now a national day of community service observed in over 35 states. It is one of the most impactful community service events held by IASA. Along with Gandhi Day of Service, IASA holds an annual charity basketball tournament, political awareness events and social activities. IASA is an organization that holds the interests of its members at heart, and strives to actively create a genuine sense of community.

Cultural Show Coordinators

Dhruv Menawat and Meena Davuluri

A cold evening back in March we walked into a room in the Michigan Union to meet with our eight Show Core members for the first time. From the minute we walked in the doors, the two of us were confident of the unique contributions each member would make in our journey to this day. With every passing day since then, we have found that our strengths compliment each other completely and have provided us with the strongest possible combination to produce the 21st annual IASA Cultural Show. As we look back on this remarkable experience, we realize that the decisions and obstacles overcome created the cohesive group we are today. This power combination, mixed with the dedication of our eight Core members, has allowed us to bring to you Sandhi - The Essence of Harmony, complete with long lasting memories, today.

The participants in this evening's performance have played key roles in bringing our hope and vision to life. We have provided you a glimpse into the vibrant Indian Culture through the lens of musical interpretation. The unique synthesis of these sounds resonates within each of us as we pass on our Indian heritage. We thank you for joining us today in this showcase of our vision and sharing this joyous moment with us.
