Congressman Joe Knollenberg

Dear Sir:

At this time, our national economy is being affected by corporations shifting to cheap labor sources overseas to increase their profit margins. Like dominoes falling, this change has rippled through every aspect of our nation's affairs. It is clear that a change is necessary if America is to remain the stable, self-sustaining country it has been.

The energy that powers the growth of our nation's economy is money. When the flow of this energy is interrupted, people begin to lose faith in our government's ability to manage the economy. It may be that few people recognize or would acknowledge that our revenue system is outdated,bloated with rules and changes, outrageously expensive; it is broken.

Before the economy disintegrates further, I respectfully request that you and your colleagues give serious consideration to the Fair Tax system, as introduced by Rep. John Linder.

It has many beneficial features, not the least of which is that corporations would scramble to return to American locations, if it were passed, and ALL wage earners would get to keep every penny they earn!

If you can only find time to read the highlights of Fair Tax, read chapter 12 in the second volume, Fair Tax, the Truth. It presents a scenario as if we now have Fair Tax and were being offered for a vote, the overbloated structure we actually have today.

The response to this concept is obvious: no one would willingly vote in the revenue system we have now!

Sincerely,

Doris Peters
