AMCULT 390
Internship in Arab American Studies
Program in American Culture
University of Michigan
Winter 2013

Internship opportunities available at the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee (www.adcmichigan.org), the Arab American National Museum (www.arabamericanmuseum.org), and Michigan Citizens for Palestinian Rights (www.palestineoffice.com), the Council on American-Islamic Relations (www.cairmichigan.org), and the Arab Community Center for Economic and Social Services (http://www.accesscommunity.org) this fall and winter terms. Internship opportunities are located in Dearborn and Southfield, about 40 minutes away from Ann Arbor, so students need access to a car.

Students start by contacting Prof. Alsultany (alsultan@umich.edu), the internship faculty advisor, for information on setting up an interview with the organization of interest. Students can sign up for 1 (3 hours of work per week), 2 (6 hours/week), 3 credits (9 hours/week), or 4 credits (12 hours/week). Mandatory credit/no credit determined based on a 5-7 page paper submitted to the faculty advisor by the student at the end of the semester and comments on the student's performance submitted to the faculty advisor by the sponsoring organization. This opportunity is intended to provide students with the opportunity to explore career options related to Arab American Studies, particularly in legal, social, cultural issues, and the arts.

INSTRUCTIONS ON HOW TO SET UP THE INTERNSHIP

Below you will find a description of available internships with contact information at each organization.

- Read through the descriptions and decide on which organization you would like to pursue an internship.
- E-mail the contact person at that organization. In the e-mail, indicate that you are contacting them as part of the Internship Program in Arab American Studies, provide a few sentences on your educational background and why you are interested in being an intern there, attach your resume, and request an interview. Be sure to copy/CC Professor Alsultany (alsultan@umich.edu) on the e-mail.
- Attend the interview. The interview is informal. The purpose is to make sure that you are a good fit for the organization, to discuss the tasks you would be involved in, and to set your weekly hours. You should feel free to tell the organization what works best with your schedule.
- Once the internship has been confirmed, send Professor Alsultany an e-mail with your UMID# and she will issue an override for you to register for AMCULT 390. You will receive an e-mail asking you to confirm registration and asking you to select the credit hours. You can sign up for 1 (3 hours of work per week), 2 (6 hours/week), 3 credits (9 hours/week), or 4 credits (12 hours/week), depending on your agreement with the organization.
- At the end of the internship, submit a paper to Professor Alsultany relaying what you did as an intern and reflecting on what you learned.
- Contact Professor Alsultany if you encounter any problems or issues along the way.

ARAB STUDIES INSTITUTE
Contact Dahlia Petrus: dpetrus@umich.edu

The Arab Studies Institute (ASI, www.arabstudiesinstitute.org) is a non-profit organization that produces knowledge on matters related to the Arab world and its relations. It serves as an institute in its own right and as an umbrella organization for four other subsidiaries: the Arab Studies Journal, Jadaliyya, Quilting Point, and FAMA (Forum on Arab and Muslim Affairs).

The Production of Knowledge Project

The Production of Knowledge Project (PKP) is a project conducted within the Forum on Arab and Muslim Affairs: the research arm of the Arab Studies Institute. This project examines the various sources and sites of knowledge production on the Middle East, including articles, books, academic institutions, "think tanks" and/or policy circles, mainstream media, and popular culture. This includes the actual final product in the form of op-eds, posts, peer-reviewed articles and books. Each will be analyzed separately and as parts of a whole.

The project will involve creating a database of knowledge production in academic and non-academic circles, starting with books and peer-reviewed articles produced on the region in the last decade, and ending with various sites of popular cultural productions, and significant sites in between. This is mainly a research project that is nonetheless labor-intensive and must proceed at a sophisticated and non-ideological level in order for it to bear fruit for observers who occupy different positions on the political spectrum. Thus, political orientation will be shielded from producing, interpreting, and evaluating the statistics involved.

Internship Structure

The internship periods extends four months. This usually occurs between January 15 and May 15 of the Spring academic semester, but is flexible with the intern's concurring academic responsibilities. All interns are expected to complete15-20 hours per week unless otherwise agreed upon by both parties. Each intern will be given a performance/progress review two weeks after the starting date of the internship. The review will determine whether the relationship works for both parties, and if so, the supervisor and the intern will commit to working together for the duration of the internship.

Internship Duties

The research assistant assigned to the films platform of the project will be responsible for establishing the foundation for the films database. This facet of the project requires the interns work closely with the project coordinator and colleagues to catalogue sources listing films on the Middle East; determine what variables are important for answering the project's main questions about the production of knowledge on the Middle East, Arabs and Muslims; retrieve information about films; and suggest changes to the research plan based on unforeseen developments. Interns will also aid in the development of a resource for future researchers that will clearly state standardized procedures for continued research after the internship that will lead to insightful and replicable findings. Interns are also expected to write at least one piece to be published on ASI's e-zine, Jadaliyya, on a topic of their choosing and are encouraged to write more.
